

INTERNATIONAL MOUNTAIN DAY 2018

International Mountain Day is celebrated annually on December 11 and officially established in the year 2002 by the United Nations. On that day in the year 2005 in the FAO/ONU headquarters in Rome the International Mountain Museums Alliance (IMMA) was constituted and this year we are celebrating our third International Mountain Day together as IMMA.

The alliance has six members which are: Museo Nazionale della Montagna in Turin (Italy), Musée Alpin in Chamonix (France), the Tatra Museum in Zakopane (Poland), Servei General d'Informació de Muntanya in Sabadell (Spain), the Whyte Museum of the Canadian Rockies in Banff (Canada) and Musée Pyrénéen in Lourdes (France).

The theme of 2018 International Mountain Day is "Mountains Matter" and this is what we have prepared for you!

THE TATRA MUSEUM IN ZAKOPANE

Muzeum
Tatrzańskie

At the Tatra Museum everyone will be able to find something interesting for themselves. Children will be able to take part in a mountain-themed workshop At the highlander's cottage, during which we will visit a house from XIX century Zakopane and learn what are some elements of highlander's cottage and how people used to live in harsh mountain climate.

Older audience is invited to a meeting with Apoloniusz Rajwa, a renowned geographer, speleologist, mountaineer, guide and mountain rescuer. He will share a story of his research in the Tatra mountains, of how one can combine work with passion – a story of a man who spent 70 years in the Tatras.

THE MUSEOMONTAGNA IN TURIN

Mountains cover one fourth of our planet and are constantly and severely under threat of deforestation, over exploitation of lands, depopulation, mining activities and tourism, which are often poorly managed and harmful for the whole ecosystem.

As the International Mountain Day was constituted to create awareness about the importance of mountains we invite you to an international project Who made my clothes, in which you could travel in time and discover which kind of fibres were used throughout the Alps.

On this occasion, the Museum offers a thrilling activity to read the environment and contribute to creating awareness about the ecological fingerprint of fibres that have become fundamental for both mountain climbers and us all. Thanks to the 3R rule – Recycle, Reuse, Reduction – we will create new, colourful threads and develop new ideas to try at home.

This free lab is for families with children aged over 5. Free entrance for children up to 10 years of age.

EMMOA might not be a member of IMMA yet, but we have each other's support in common venues, like the International Mountain Day.

During the month of December at the Euskal Museoa of Bilbao there will be held an exhibition Montañas de dinero/Mendi Bete Diru (Mountains of Money) – a common project of Servei (SGIM) of Sabadell, EMMOA and the Bilbao Mountain Film Festival.

A guided tour of the exhibition will take place on December 11th.
